Notice the overlooked

Practise one concrete act of inclusion, not just a kind feeling.

What makes a space technically open but socially hard to enter?

You can always pass, write your answer privately, or use a made-up example.

Luke 19:5

“When Jesus reached the spot, he looked up and said to him, ‘Zacchaeus, come down immediately. I must stay at your house today.’”

Luke 19:5, New International Version (NIV)

CHRISTIAN CONNECTION

Jesus notices the person the crowd has written off, and calls him by name. Inclusion is more than a friendly feeling — it opens a real path into relationship, participation and change.

Which of these actually open a way in?

In groups, read all six responses to the scenario.

Sort them, then rewrite the weak ones using See, Say, Make room, Follow through.

1 "Mei, you're up after me — take the next turn on the model."

3 "We're basically done, but you can watch."

5 "Just join in, you'll pick it up."

2 "Mei, we've built version one — would you run the test and record what changes?"

4 "Mei, here's the rule we're using. In two minutes I'll check the job makes sense."

6 "Be nice to Mei, everyone."

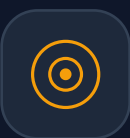

Test each one: could someone standing there actually do something because of what was said?

“One inclusion move I will make at school this week is ...”

Write this one privately — you don't have to share it.

TAKEAWAY
