Turning a harsh verdict about yourself into a skill still being learned.

“I can’t do fractions.” Now add: yet. What has changed — and what has not?

You can always pass, write your answer privately, or use a made-up example.

Philippians 1:6

“being confident of this, that he who began a good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus.”

Philippians 1:6, New International Version (NIV)

CHRISTIAN CONNECTION

Paul is sure that God has begun good work in people and keeps going with it. So 'not yet' is not a failure verdict — but it is only honest when it comes with help and a real next step.

Which of these sentences would actually help someone improve?

In groups of three or four, read all six sentences.

Sort them into READY TO USE and NEEDS EDITING, then rewrite the ones that need it.

1

"Not yet solving two-step problems alone — tomorrow I'll do two with my teacher."

2

"I'll just try harder next time."

3

"I am not yet packing my bag the night before — tonight I will use a checklist."

4

"Not yet joining group talk easily — at lunch I'll ask one person one question."

5

"I am terrible at speaking and I always will be."

6

"I am not yet speaking for 45 seconds without reading every word."

Ask of each one: is it precise, and does it say what happens next?
